"Receiving carrier certification from this world-class company gives our customers confidence that their mission critical communications won't fail when in the field," says Axon's VP Connected Devices and Product Management, Jason Hartford. "We are thrilled to be on track to begin shipping the Axon Body 3 to customers by the end of September and be in full production by the end of the year."

"Verizon is happy to continue its relationship with Axon, powering cutting-edge technology for public safety officials who utilize critical communications solutions," says Nick Nilan, Director of Product Development for Public Sector at Verizon. "Public safety agencies continue to work with Verizon because we have the nation's largest and most reliable 4G LTE network and we're excited to continue to bring innovative, advanced solutions to first responders nationwide."

Verizon has earned the trust of public safety organizations by providing reliable, secure communications when it matters most. The Verizon Responder Private Core is a portion of its leading 4G LTE network, separating emergency data communications from commercial and consumer traffic. Verizon also provides priority and preemption services, as well as enhanced service management and control on the nation's largest and most reliable 4G LTE network.

Axon Body 3 is available to purchase now for agencies in the U.S. To learn more about Axon Body 3 visit www.axon.com/AxonBody-3.
